BAKER EXPLAINS

ys He Isn't at Loggerheads With Lane Over Coal Prices.

By Associated Press.

ASHINGTON, July 2.—Secretary Baker issued a statement today to dispel any impression that there was any difference of opinion between Secretary Lane and himself over the reduction of the price of coal and saying that his letter to Director Gifford of the National Defense Council was written to preclude what he regards as a popular misconception of what was going on in the coal situation.

"So far as I know," Secretary Baker's statement said, "there is no difference of feeling or purposes between Secretary Lane and myself regarding the coal situation. My statement was designed to prevent what appeared to be a very likely popular misconception of the whole situation."

The reported rejection by Secretary Lane of the agreement upon $3 as a maximum price a ton for coal has left the coal operators "up in the air" as to what they will probably continue selling for what they can get until notified definitely what to do.

SPEEDING UP ON WORK OF CHECKING UP SUBSCRIPTIONS

Additional Lists Soon to Be Published and Receipts Sent Out.

The work at Red Cross headquarters in the Citizens' National Bank building is going forward more speedily now, Miss Elizabeth Kurtz taking up clerical duties there this morning, but Secretary J. L. Schick and those who have been helping him at times have been simply swamped with the immense amount of work necessary to clear things up.

Certain delays, Mr. Schick said this morning, have been unavoidable. Notices of amounts due on pledges will not be mailed out for probably a week. Money will be received for pledge payments at any time, however. Regular Red Cross receipts for the payments already made will be mailed the latter part of this week. After all lists of contributors have been published in the newspapers, Secretary Schick will check up with his lists, and any mistakes will be corrected.

Some additional contributions have come in, none of them large ones.

F. E. Markell, chairman of the campaign, has received a letter from Albert W. Staub, director of the Atlantic division of the Red Cross, in which it is shown that the Atlantic division, of which Connellsville is a part, contributed more than half of the total $100,000,000 war fund.

"I wish to congratulate you," Mr. Staub writes to Mr. Markell, "upon the success of your financial campaign in connection with the Red Cross war fund. You may be interested in knowing that the five states which make up the Atlantic Division, namely, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware, contributed $58,250,000 up to June 28; the total for the whole country on that date being $110,373,000, with contributions still coming in and a number of cities yet to be heard from. Pennsylvania gave us $9,244,000.

"It must be a great satisfaction for you and those who were associated with you in the local campaign to realize that this remarkable achievement was due in part to the personal efforts that you put forth.

"Will you be good enough to extend to all those who participated in the campaign our sincere appreciation, which is expressed on behalf of the large number of people who will be benefitted through the disbursement of the fund."

Local Boards to Decide All But Industrial and Agricultural Claims.

LONG LIST OF INELIGIBLES

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Regulations to govern the next step toward selecting the national war army from the millions registered for service on June 5, were issued today at the direction of President Wilson. They leave to be prescribed later the manner of determining the order of liability of the men registered, but set forth in great detail the method of arriving at exemptions and the work generally of the local and district boards already named to carry out the task.

Exemption regulations add little to the terms of the draft law, the question of whether a man between the ages of 21 and 30 is entitled to exemption because of dependents, the nature of his occupation or physical unfitness being for the boards to decide after proper investigation. It is made very clear that there are to be no class exemptions and that each individual case must be decided upon its merits. The local boards—one for each county of less than 45,000 or city of 30,000 with additional boards where necessary for each additional 30,000 population—will pass upon claims for exemption except those based upon industrial or agricultural occupations subject to appeal to the district boards. All cases involving agricultural or industrial exemption will be passed upon by the district boards, one for each federal judicial district, which also will decide appeals from decisions from the local boards.

In the near future a date will be set by Brigadier General Crowder, provost marshal general, for the meeting and organization of the boards. At the same time it is expected that the selection regulations will be promulgated, so that the process may be put under way without delay. The present intention is to call the men selected to the colors about September 1 or as soon thereafter as the cantonments to house them can be completed.

Persons who must be exempted or discharged by the local boards, include:

Officers of the United States, of the state, territory and the District of Columbia, ministers of religion, students of divinity, persons in the military or naval service of the United States, subjects of Germany, all other aliens who have not taken out first papers, county or municipal officers, custom house clerks, workmen in federal armories, arsenals and navy yards, persons in the federal service designated by the President for exemption, pilots, merchant marine sailors, those with a status with respect to dependents which renders their exclusion desirable (a married man with dependent wife or child, son of a dependent widow, son of dependent aged or infirm parents or brother of dependent orphan child under 16 years of age), those found morally deficient and any member of any well recognized religious sect existing May 18, 1917, whose creed forbids participation in war and whose religious convictions accord with the creed.

BOYERS RELEASED

Mother Swears to Ages of Men Branded as Slackers.

Melvin E. Boyer and his brother D. A. Boyer of Bullskin township, who were committed to jail last week upon the allegation of the wife of the former that both were slackers on Registration Day through misrepresentation as to their ages, have been released on order of the United States district attorney in Pittsburg.

Mrs. Mary Boyer, mother of the men, appeared before Sheriff Howard and made oath to the birth of her son Melvin E. Boyer in Bedford county on November 13, 1879 and of his brother, D. A. Boyer in Somerset county in 1882 by which it appears that their ages are 38 and 35 years respectively, hence beyond the registration limit. Sheriff Howard got in communication with the office of the United States district attorney in Pittsburg and advised him of the evidence offered by Mrs. Boyer, whereupon the sheriff was ordered to release both men.

Melvin E. Boyer has been employed as night watchman at the West Penn shops on the West Side for almost four years past. He resumed his employment there on Saturday evening.

LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL BUILDERS LAND BIG JOB AT VANDERGRIFT

Lawrence & Critchfield to Erect $105,000 High School Building There.

Lawrence & Critchfield, contractors on the new high school here, on Saturday night were awarded the contract to build a $105,000 high school at Vandergrift. Bids had been opened two weeks ago but the specifications were revised when the school board saw that the estimates exceeded the amount of money available for the structure. On Saturday night new bids opened and Lawrence & Critchfield were found to be the lowest.

Work will start in about 10 days. Messrs Lawrence and Critchfield will, however, give their personal attention to finishing the local high school, which is now well along toward completion. Their foreman will supervise the excavating, foundation construction and other preliminary work at Vandergrift.

The Vandergrift school was designed by W. G. Eckles, architect of the Connellsville high school. It will be built upon a large plot situated on top of a hill in the residential portion of the town. The contract requires its completion in 11 months.

Although Lawrence & Critchfield have built many large buildings in Somerset and Bedford counties, in West Virginia and other parts of this section, their work was unknown in this immediate vicinity until they undertook the construction of the new high school here. Persons who know state that the school stands as an example of honest construction and that the school district is getting its full money's worth. Both members of the firm are Somerset men.

WOMEN TOLD BY MINISTERS TO SAVE FOOD; PROHIBITION URGED; SPECULATORS RAPPED

Food Conservation Sunday Observed With Forceful Sermons in Churches.

DECLARE WASTE IS A SIN

Pointing out definitely what the gospel of no-waste means and repeating the declaration of a member of the French mission that the waste of the American people in a year would feed the Allied armies during the duration of the war, Rev. J. L. Proudfit delivered a forceful food conservation sermon at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning.

Rev. Proudfit declared that the man who conspires to raise food prices so high that poor people must go hungry should be hanged on the nearest telegraph pole. "He is a traitor to his country, an ally of the enemy and a disgrace to the God who made him," was his characterization of the food price juggler.

Prohibition of the use of grain for manufacturing liquors was also advocated by Rev. Proudfit. "What good will it do," he asked, "if the men of the country are permitted to drink the food which the women save?"

Rev. Wilbur Nelson of the Baptist church preached on "The Sin of Wastefulness," taking as his text, "Gather up the fragments that remain that nothing may be lost," John vi.12. Rev. Nelson pointed out the acts of Jesus as a great example to follow in avoiding wastefulness. Although Jesus could multiply the loaves and the fishes, he said, He kept the food that was left over either for the future use of Himself and His disciples or to give to the poor. "Learn from His example and works, the need of frugality," said Rev. Nelson.

"Waste is sin," he continued. "And there is an enormous amount of waste in this country. Food experts tell us that one ounce of food wasted in each home each day of the year, means a total annual waste of 500,000,000 pounds. A single slice of bread wasted in each home each day of the year means a total annual waste of one million loaves. The annual total waste of food in the country is $700,000,000, or seven times as much as the Red Cross asked for its war fund. All this might be put to use, and the present necessity is so great that we must put it to some use. Herbert C. Hoover says that unless we act instantly, the problem will be unsolvable in a year's time. The stock of food in the world is lower than ever before in modern times. Everyone must do his bit to preserve food and prevent wastage." Rev. Nelson appealed especially to the women to save food.

Rev. G. L. C. Richardson also preached on "Gathering Up the Fragments That Nothing Be Lost," declaring in the course of his sermon that we are confronted with the stupendous task of feeding a hungry world. "While we have plenty for ourselves," he said, "we must practice self denial to feed the Allies and help them win the war. A soldier can't fight on an empty stomach."

Rev. W. J. Everhart was another minister who rapped food speculators and liquor. "There are two great enemies to food supply," he said. "The first is the food speculator. The government assures us that we are to get rid of these rascals. They should be shot as traitors. The second is an enemy, worse than Germany. It is booze. Russia with the war and without vodka is better than Russia without war and with vodka, it is said. The wheat used in liquor would make 11,000,000 loaves of bread daily."

Rev. Everhart told of the demand the world is making on us, with the Allies looking to the United States for the greater part of their food supply. "What can we do to help?" he asked. "First, we can save waste. The average waste of a family in this country is $50 per year. Now we must starve the waste can, or perhaps we will starve. Second, we can utilize our yards and vacant lots for the raising of food stuffs. Every increase in supply helps keep the cost of food down."

Rev. J. H. Lambertson at the Methodist Protestant church said that persons must stop saying, "I can't eat this" and "I don't like that." Rev. Lambertson recommended one meatless day per week, and the cultivation of the soy bean.

Rev. C. C. Buckner of the Christian church declared that the greatest sinner of all is the man who lives in luxury during these times. "No man has a right to live in luxury now," he said. "Patriotic service is to be economical. There never was a more Christian movement than the one for elimination of waste. Conservation is the need of the hour."

Rev. E. B. Burgess of the Lutheran church read Food Dictator H. C. Hoover's letter at his morning service, and Rev. J. S. Showers of the United Brethren church outlined Mr. Hoover's request.

40 SERVICE MEN QUICKLY SIGN UP FOR NEW COMPANY

Quick Response to Colonel Barnett's Call For "75 Men by Midnight."

Within a few hours after the report that 75 men were wanted by Colonel James E. Barnett for a company of guards to be organized here had been circulated Saturday, 40 men, all having seen service, called at the office of Dr. L. P. McCormick and put in their applications. The turnout of veterans and men who have been connected with either the regular army or National Guard was decidedly encouraging. No names will be given out until after they have been approved by Colonel Barnett.

Dr. McCormick had had no previous word concerning the organizing of the company and Saturday morning received a telegram asking that 75 men be secured by midnight. Dr. McCormick considered it impossible to get that many but he took names of all those who volunteered.

He does not know what the next step of the colonel will be and can take no further action until he hears from him. Dr. McCormick will however, continue to take the names of those who offer themselves.

Those enlisting for this service must be 18 years old, or if between 16 and 18 must have their parents' consent. The advantages of service in the signal corps include constant action, exciting and interesting work, and knowledge of the value of the work to the army. Young men interested and desiring information about the government's proposition may see Mr. Ashe at the office in the high school building.

THOMPSON CREDITORS DISCUSS THE HILL SALE FOR OVER 4 HOURS

Proposed Reorganization Explained in Detail by Austin; Dumbauld Leads Attack.

The meeting of the creditors of J. V. Thompson, held in Uniontown on Saturday afternoon in response to a call of Jasper Augustine and William Searight, resulted in nothing more than four and one-half hours of discussion of the Hill plan to take over the claims of the unsecured creditors on the basis of about 10 cents on the dollar.

The court room was filled to its capacity by creditors and others interested in the proceedings. E. C. Higbee of Connellsville presided. Judge Francis J. Kooser of Somerset; Attorney H. S. Dumbauld and C. A. Tutt and Jasper Augustine of Uniontown, made addresses attacking the plan. A. Plumer Austin, member of the J. V. Thompson Creditors' Committee, and Attorneys M. M. Cochran and D. M Hertzog spoke in its defense.

Attorney Austin explained at length the negotiations with the Hill interests which had resulted in the formulation of the proposed plan of reorganization. He related with considerable detail the obstacles which the creditors' committee had met in their efforts and pointed out very clearly that if bankruptcy is substituted for an amicable settlement of the estate the unsecured creditors will receive not more than five cents on the dollar, and the secured creditors nothing more than the face of their mortgages.

Attorney Dumbauld attacked what he termed "the weakness of the proposition," and suggested the formation of a corporation by the creditors capitalized at the full indebtedness and stock issued for the amount of the claims to take over the properties.

M M. Cochran spoke rather earnestly in reply to Attorney Dumbauld characterizing the latter's capitalization of indebtedness plan as "butterfly talk; a phantom in the air." Mr Cochran directed attention to the effect already produced upon coal land values by the few foreclosures which have already been made and asserted that if this becomes general the creditors stand to lose their all.

"If this plan goes through," said Mr. Cochran, "the unsecured creditors will get 25 to 35 per cent and the liquidation will take effect within the next four months instead of the next four or five years. If this proposition doesn't go through and some some quack medicine doctor comes along and leads you astray, the thing that is going to happen will be bankruptcy; there will be no stability to any values in Fayette county, Greene county, Washington county and West Virginia for the next 10 years and your property that you own there will not be worth 50 cents on the dollar compared with what it is today. You will not only lose your claims absolutely and not only one hundred dollars an acre on your coal, but possibly two hundred dollars. You will be the grandest set of losers that ever did lose in Western Pennsylvania, if you follow that course. If you follow the other course, you will be establishing the value of property again in Western Pennsylvania."

A resolution offered by Attorney Dumbauld to the effect that it was the sense of the meeting that the Hill plan is not for the best interests of the creditors, was withdrawn after the point of order was raised by ex-Judge R. E. Umbel that only about 250 of the 1,600 creditors were present at the meeting. Mr Thompson attended the meeting but took no part in the discussion.

TO ENLIST EVERY WOMAN IN HOOVER'S FOOD-SAVING ARMY

Every woman in the state of Pennsylvania will be asked to join a food-saving army. Each woman is to be an enlisted "soldier" for Uncle Sam and the allies. The commander who will direct this army is Herbert C. Hoover, the man who fed Belgium, and now Food Administrator at Washington, D. C.

The enrollment will be conducted by means of pledge cards similar to the one reproduced above. Read it carefully. Every housekeeper in Pennsylvania will receive one and will be expected to sign it before July 15 in testimony that full support will be given to the food conservation plan.

Every woman in the household is to sign this pledge whether a member of the family or an employe.

In addition to the million and a half Pennsylvania "soldiers," Mr. Hoover will direct more than eighteen million other women "soldiers" who are to be similarly recruited from the other states and territories. Each woman "soldier" will be assigned to the second line of defense to fight the waste of food.

Mr. Hoover's position with respect to those who enlist will be less that of a general than that of an adviser, who suggests ways by which waste may be avoided. Enrollment compels no one to any course of action beyond conviction of duty. Each member of this army will do as much of what Mr. Hoover advises as her circumstances warrant, and her judgment dictates. In other words, all co-operation, even after enrollment, will be voluntary.

In connection with the activities of a food-saving army, President Wilson said:

"To provide adequate food supplies for the coming year is of absolutely vital importance to the conduct of the war. Without a very conscientious elimination of waste and a very strict economy in our food consumption we cannot hope to fulfil this primary duty and in no other direction can women so greatly assist as by enlisting in the service of the food administration and cheerfully accepting its direction and advice."

Mr. Hoover has appointed as recruiting officer for the state of Pennsylvania, Howard Heinz, Director of the Food Supply Department of the Committee of Public Safety. Mr. Heinz has asked the co-operation of the seventy local Public Safety Committees in various parts of the state in enlisting the housekeepers. Other agencies will also aid in the distribution of 1,500,000 pledge cards throughout the state. Dr. Nathan S. Schaeffer, State Superintendent of Schools, has written every county superintendent of schools in the state, strongly recommending the co-operation of local school boards in the work of registration.

Women's National Council of Defense and other women's organizations, Red Cross, Boy Scouts and civic and religious bodies have been asked to assist in making the registration complete.

Each card when signed will be forwarded by the local committees to Mr. Hoover, in Washington. The name of each signer will be recorded. Specific instructions will from time to time be forwarded from Mr. Hoover. Household tags which will serve as badges of enlistment to be displayed in windows will be furnished.

The slogan of the army is "Feed the allies out of what we save." Ninety per cent of the food consumed in the United States goes through the hands of women, and they may best "serve by saving."

"If you do not receive a personal invitation to sign, consider this your invitation and ask your local Public Safety Committee for a card, or sign the form at the head of this article and mail it to your local Committee of Public Safety, or to the Food Supply Department, 1426 South Penn Square, Philadelphia.

LOCAL B. & O. TEAM WINS; WHEELING IS VICTIM; SCORE 6-1

Captain Stillwagon's Outfit, With Danley Going Strong, Too Much For West Virginians.

Connellsville's Baltimore & Ohio ball tossers added another scalp to their string at Fayette Field Saturday afternoon by taking over the Wheeling Baltimore & Ohio team by a 6 to 1 score. The locals presented a somewhat crippled lineup, due to the absence of two regulars, but the substitutes filled in satisfactorily.

Captain Stillwagon's outfit outplayed the visitors at every point. The rough condition of the infield worked against the Wheeling boys, several balls which should have been easy chances bounding badly and going for hits, but with Danley going his regular gait there was no chance for the Wes. Virginians at any stage.

Costello, who occupied the slab for Wheeling, appeared to have fair stuff, but was wild and his lack of control helped the locals to part of their scores. On two occasions he projected his curve ball into Chip Francis' ample tonneau, and King and Barrett likewise acted as buffers for two more of his misplaced shoots. On the other hand, Bill Danley was master of the situation from start to finish, and was never in danger. He struck out 14 batters and allowed three hits.

Danley beat out an infield hit in the fourth and went to second on an out. Costello hit Francis, Stillwagon hit a hard one over third and Danley scored. Bruff walked in the next frame and was on his way to second when Jones laid down a pippin of a bunt which he beat out easily. Bruff kept on to third and scored when Harvey's peg to catch him went pretty near to Greene Junction. Jones took second. Jones tried to score shortly afterward when the ball got away from Salisbury, and rolled to middle but was nailed standing up by Conner's good peg. In the sixth Francis hit to Saltsbury who fumbled and then threw wild, Chip going to second. Stilly hit to short and Francis was caught at third, after which Costello unpacked a wild pitch, Stillwagon taking second and scoring a moment later on Fisher's productive whack to right.

In the following frame the locals lit on Costello all spraddled out, three hits and some weird work in the Wheeling infield infield netting three scores.

Wheeling got two of their three hits in the seventh, together with their lone tally, which was a gift, at that. With two down, Conner singled to right and Schriver hit to short. Getsie tried to make the play at second, but instead, let the ball slip and threw it over into the "Old Country," putting runners on second and third. Jarvis singled to middle and Conner scored. Schriver tried to do likewise but Francis' peg caught him at the plate by yards.

A Day of Celebration

"It is with the greatest pleasure I write to let you know that yesterday my husband and I celebrated our anniversary of a happy and prosperous year—the first one in our sixteen years of married life. My husband, when not under the influence of liquor, was the kindest and most considerate of men. But his appetite for liquor had got so far beyond his control he was rarely ever sober, and I had given up in despair of his ever reforming. But, thanks to a kind Providence and a good friend, he was induced to try the Neal Three-Day Treatment, with the result we have enjoyed a year of happiness and prosperity after these long years of misery. If any statement I can make will imbue others with the confidence to take your treatment, it will at least make me feel as if I had been of some service to some poor suffering wife and family."

This is only one of the hundreds of letters received from grateful humanity who have been saved from the drink habit. If you are interested, write or call for further information. LABOR GETS PLACES

The differences which have arisen between labor leaders and the administration over representation of the former on the Committee on Coal Production were adjusted at a recent meeting between representatives of the United Mine Workers of America, the American Federation of Labor and the Council of National Defense and F. S. Peabody, chairman of the Committee on Coal Production.

As a result of that meeting the following representatives of labor have been made members of the committee on coal production: John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America; Frank Hays, vice president of the United Mine Workers of America; William Green, secretary of the United Mine Workers of America; John L. Lewis, statistician of the United Mine Workers of America; James Lord, president of the mining department of the American Federation of Labor; John Mitchell, chairman of the Industrial Commission of the State of New York, and H. L. Kerwin, secretary to the Secretary of Labor.

IT WAS TUMBLE AND TOSS FOR B. H. MORGAN

A Very Bad Sleeper Until Nerv-Worth Came Wonderfully to the Rescue.

A short time ago Mr. Morgan, who is connected with the Charleston Milling & Produce Co., Charleston, W. Va., gave the following signed statement to the Nerv-Worth druggists there. As it shows, restless nights were not alone in making life something of a burden to him:

"I was unable to sleep and had no appetite. What little I would eat would sour on my stomach and cause me to belch. Suffered from sick headaches. I felt just as tired on arising as I did on going to bed. Would toss and tumble and got very little rest.

"After taking Nerv-Worth for two days my condition began to improve and after finishing one bottle I feel like a new man. I eat and sleep well and feel like working now, where it was an effort before. I recommend Nerv-Worth to all my friends or to anyone suffering as I did.

(Signed) B. H. MORGAN.

Philippine Fruits.

There have been found in the Philippines two fruits entirely unknown to Europe and even to America. One of these is the durian, which grows on a lofty tree somewhat resembling an elm, is about as large as a cocoanut, has a shiny shell and contains a creamy pulp which combines some of the flavors of delicious custard with those of a fine cheese. American soldiers in the Philippines have dubbed the durian the "vegetable limburger." The other rare fruit is the mangosteen; but the exquisitely flavored liquid it contains has not yet been successfully preserved for shipping abroad.

Not the Right Brand.

"I must request the congregation to contribute generously this morning," said the Rev. Mr. Smallfee sadly. "My stipend is eight months in arrears, and my creditors are pressing. I, of course, work largely for love, and love equally, of course, is tender, but it isn't legal tender."—London Telegraph.

MUDDLING THE COAL PRICE SETTLEMENT.

President Wilson having personally counselled with the Federal Trade Commission in the matter of coal price regulation, and that body having later met with the Committee on Coal Production and representatives of the operators and affected an arrangement for the voluntary control of price, stimulation of production and the regulation of distribution, it would appear that Secretary of War Baker, as president of the Council of National Defense, and Secretary of Navy Daniels as a lay member of the same body, are setting themselves up as sort of super-censors in their repudiation of the action which was taken at the suggestion of the President and other members of the Cabinet.

It may be true, as the defamer of the Valley Forge heroes asserts, that there is no legal power by which any of the multifarious commissions and committees, which clutter up good floor space in the Washington office buildings, can regulate the price of any commodity. But why should so insignificant a matter stand in the way? The Constitution, all the laws of economics and sound business, not to mention the fundamental laws of prudence and sound common sense, have been set aside with impunity by the governmental departments, in their mad haste to subject everything and everybody to a dictatorship, in conjunction with the abdication by Congress of its legislative functions, the present government really knows no law save the will or discretion of the President or the whim of some departmental head to whom extraordinary powers are delegated by executive order, if that be more convenient than to have Congress make the authorization.

Secretary Baker insists that no procedure be entered upon in the coal price situation other than that the Federal Trade Commission be allowed to conclude its investigation of the cost of mining coal, as "directed by the President and for his information." Even with this done we will be no nearer to a solution of this question than we are to a solution of the high cost of living problem. Investigation after investigation has been made in that quarter, and the cost of making paper, and the public has not profited an iota as a result. Neither is there assurance, even by the pulling secretary of war, that an investigation of the cost of mining coal will accomplish one whit more than have the protracted, numerous and expensive investigations of the cost of foodstuffs.

The fact that the coal producers met with government officials and consented to a voluntary relinquishment of the first profits they have been enabled to make since the Democrats came into power, and agreed to assist other agencies in clearing up the coal situation and insuring better distribution, as well as expressing a willingness to consent to further reductions in price if conditions revealed by an investigation warrant such reductions, constitutes the first and only real solution of a price problem that has been brought about. All the bluster and boasting of what was proposed to be done, from President Wilson down to the busy-bodying department heads in Washington and the cheapest demagogs in Congress, have availed absolutely nothing.

The coal producers, in a spirit of patriotism and sacrifice that should shame the food speculators to similar action, even if the Democrats in Congress cannot force them, accomplished more than all the forces, agencies, commissions and what not of the Administration have been able to do in the whole four years of its history. The projection of the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy into the coal price situation is certain to complicate it so inextricably that a wholly satisfactory solution of it, either in the direction of a stimulated production, bette. distribution or lower prices, will become almost an impossibility.

The coal producing and consuming public would be disposed to give much more earnest heed to the objections secretaries Baker and Daniels have made to the manner and form of the coal price settlement if they could point to an equally significant achievement by any governmental agency in the direction of reducing the high cost of foodstuffs, to which the Democratic party was solemnly pledged long before an unkind fate returned it to power in national affairs.

"AN OBSOLETE PAPER."

It was largely a waste of time and energy for Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, the Democratic whip in the Senate, to take that body into his confidence and reveal, for the public's benefit, the fact that his party has acquired about the same degree of reverence for the Constitution that Emperor William has for treaties between his own and other nations.

The admissions of Senator J. Ham serve, however, to illuminate the public mind as to the rather fine distinction between the regard of the Democrats for the Constitution and the Kaiser's esteem for treaties. By his designation of "a scrap of paper," which the autocratic ruler of Germany has applied to treaties, he merely called attention, in a certain sense, to what has been a more or less historic fact that, in time of war, treaties are themselves insufficient to compel the signatories to them to adhere to their stipulations. If such a repudiation became a military necessity. Equally bold, if not also equally frank as the Kaiser, the Democratic Senate leader would have us know that the leaders of his party have attained unto such wisdom in the legislative and executive functions of popular government that the revered instrument our forefathers framed as our charter of liberties has become "an obsolete paper."

Not only are we told that the Constitution has become so antiquated that it can no longer be adapted to the up-to-date Democratic plan of government by commissions, controllers and dictators, but Senator J. Ham would have us believe that throughout the previous history of our country this once sacred document has so signally failed of its purpose that it "in too many instances it has served to impede rather than to advance progress."

In the light of the ready surrender which Congress has made of its functions and powers, it is not surprising that a leader of the dominant party should boast that its members in Congress no longer derive their just powers from the consent of the governed but that they are there merely to be used as a sort of rubber stamp to give official approval to executive orders and the mandates of commissions and dictators, the creation of which the Constitution never even contemplated much less expressly provided.

The bold disavowal by this Democratic leader of the binding force and effect of the Constitution may be, and probably is, in accord with the attitude and purposes of the Administration, but the people of the country are not yet ready to make as abject a surrender of their prerogatives as has Congress. "There are only two sources of power," Senator Reed of Missouri reminded Senator Lewis after his public repudiation of the Constitution. "One is from God and one from the people. The American system comes from the people. The Kaiser believes he derives his from God. He who denies here that he gets his authority from the Constitution must take his stand by the side of Wilhelm."

In the arrogance of their power the Democratic Congressmen may for the present feel themselves to be beyond the limitations or control of what they are pleased to term "an obsolete paper." Later they are themselves quite certain to become obsolete through the exercise by the electorate of a highly prized right which is vouchsafed by the instrument present day Democrats spurn as an impediment to progress.

Secretary Lane, the single really big man of the Cabinet, knows that the business men of America need but to be appealed to in order to patriotically meet any situation. Secretaries Baker and Daniels, the mingts, would use only threats or force. The differences in results achieved are the best measure of the methods. Secretary Lane gets things done voluntarily; Secretaries Baker and Daniels merely get things muddled.

Secretary of War Baker has resumed his earlier occupation of "spilling the beans," which has proven to be about his only accomplishment of note, if we except his Valley Forge oration.

Senator J. Ham Lewis regards the Constitution as an impediment to progress. So it is—to the progress of the Senator's party to the establishment of a complete autocracy in our government.

Brown University has conferred upon Food Dictator Hoover the degree of LL. D., in absentia. When Congress gets through conferring the different degrees of authority upon him there will arise an ardent wish upon the part of some persons that they too could be placed in absentia.

Any subordinate of the government with an office in Washington, who does not consider himself a dictator or controller of some sort these days, is either a Republican who by some mischance was allowed to hold over, or a Democratic appointee still new to the job.

President Wilson says the Senate should settle the question of liquor control during war time. The Senate with equally earnest desire to shift the responsibility says the President should have discretionary power to determine the issue of "wet" or "dry." Sort of a game of "tag," with nobody willing to be "it."

Speaking of "efficiency," how does that made in America compare with that made in Germany when we recall that General Pershing's army was moved to France strictly on schedule time and without the loss or serious illness of a single man?

It is somewhat of a reflection upon the patriotism of the native-born that the foreign-born citizens of Connellsville and vicinity are to show us how to celebrate the Fourth of July.

The clean plate and the lean garbage can will help win the war.

The rider legislation will facilitate the passage of many national legislators to the realm of political obscurity.

THE SAFETY-PIN.

The safety-pin is a humble implement which is used to hold babies together. If it were not for the safety-pin thousands of sweet, innocent babies would have to wear suspenders and hose-supporters, instead of being allowed to grow up in a free and bow-legged attitude.

The safety-pin was invented long before buttons were thought of. In fact, if man had his way about it buttons would not be used at all except for decorative purposes. The average button, is a melancholy failure, having a tendency to give way at some crucial moment and cause the owner to regret having left home. Some of the worst catastrophes in life have befallen men who relied upon a bone suspender button, only to have it break in two in the middle at the opening of the hesitation waltz.

The first safety-pin used in this country was gotten up by the husband of a Rhode Island woman who wanted him to be in style and wear a leather belt. This man was a mechanical genius, and designed the first and only safety-pin which could be inserted by hand without maiming the inserter. His secret died with him, and today, despite the great advancement made in the realm of invention, we have the murderous, brass-jawed, safety-pin with which babies are pinnacled to their clothes every day. How often is it the case that a wee baby cries in its sleep, in a fitful manner, and is immediately treated for colic, when the chances are ten to one that it has been impaled upon a long, sloping safety-pin.

If the laws of this country were intended to render equal and exact justice, the safety-pin would be banished from polite society and supplanted by the clothes-pin. This would be a great relief to scores of husbands who have tried to dress a playful, squirming baby while their wives were at the club, and in doing so have run a two-inch safety-pin through their left thumb. If Congress would pay more attention to such practical legislation as this and less to pork, there would be more happiness in married life.

A popular form of safety-pin is the flouring-pin, which is used to pin an abusive husband to the kitchen floor. The use of this pin, as a corrective implement, is advocated by both press and clergy and upheld by our courts, except where the jury is composed of married men.

KEEP WORKING.

However grim the prospect is, when battle steeds are neighing, let's buckle down and stick to biz and do all kinds of haying. Whenever I go down the street a lot of jays come to me, and paw the ground with restless feet, and make predictions gloomy. They talk of panic and of want, of famine and starvation, and say our banner soon will flaunt above a ruined nation. I hate to hear them sigh and moan, I hate their dismal sally. I take each by his collarbone and push him down an alley. I hate the man who makes parade of all his doleful dreaming. I like to break his shoulderblade, regardless of his screaming. I do my work from day to day, I hustle like the dickens, I give the hogs their lucious whey, and feed the hornless chickens. The morning's milk I deftly skim, I work the churns and wringers, I teach my growing ducks to swim and give the beans new stringers. I am so busy cutting hair from golden rolls of butter, I haven't time to paw the air or mope around and mutter. We'll whip the foe, without a doubt, our arms will be the victor, and I detest the grouchy scout—I do, dog-gone his piatur'.

Why Germany is Unbeaten

By P. W. WILE.
(Former Berlin Correspondent of the London Mail.)

All the men, women and children in the empire regard themselves as being at war and are conducting themselves accordingly.

The empire has a government which governs with no other consideration than that of waging and winning the war.

The government leaves absolutely nothing to chance, anticipating contingencies and not temporizing with them after they have arisen.

The nation's food supply, though disastrously low, has been organized since November, 1914, on a basis which makes starvation impossible.

Failures in public office—military, naval and civil—are ruthlessly relegated, no matter how high sounding a name or brilliant a reputation requires to be sacrificed.

The industrial classes, realizing that their own existence as well as that of Germany is at stake, are working tooth and nail in the national cause.

Strikes are mercilessly dealt with and broken before they have had time to spread by treating would-be strikers and their leaders as common enemies of the state.

Despite their failings and disagreeable qualities, as a nation, the German people are thrifty, frugal, highly patriotic and endlessly willing to sacrifice for the Fatherland.

The German armies, after 34 months of fighting, are still in occupation, with minor exceptions, of the vast territories which their superior preparedness enabled them to conquer and hold.

The German fleet is still intact, numerically more powerful than ever, capable of risking daring sorties into mined British waters, and sinking hundreds of thousands of tons of allied and neutral shipping per month.

German man-power, which rests on a prewar population of roundly 70,000,000, is no nearer exhaustion than the man-power of the United Kingdom, with a prewar population of 46,000,000.

German statesmanship, eschewing war measures, like the stoppage of racing to save oats, deals with burning necessities, like rationing of breadstuffs. The German government will not shrink from rationing the air men breathe if it will promote the winning of the war. And it will not wait until the nation has no more breath left before issuing breath-cards.

BE CANNY.

Everyody can. Put your spare time into cans and jars.

Home canning is kitchen patriotism.

Don't have an empty preserving jar in your neighborhood next fall.

If you have more preserving jars than you can fill, lend them to a neighbor who will make them work for the nation.

Some neighbor surely can eat or put up surplus products from your place.

A quart of canned peaches or tomatoes on the shelf is worth a bushel rotting on the ground.

See that the shelves in your preserving closet sag just a little this year.

Weeding will seem easy next winter when mother serves those home canned string beans.

Home Drying of Vegetables and Fruits

Dry vegetables and fruits for winter use if tin cans and glass jars for canning are scarce or expensive.

This is the advice of specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, who recently have studied the possibilities of conserving food to meet war needs in spite of any difficulties that may be experienced in obtaining canning containers. Drying was a well-recognized and successful way of preserving certain foods before canning came into general use, the specialists point out, and modern methods make it still more practicable than formerly, either in the home or by community groups.

Three methods of drying have been found by the Department specialists to give satisfactory results. These are sun drying, drying by artificial heat, and drying with air blasts, as before an electric fan. Trays for drying by any one of these methods, as well as tray frames for use over stoves or before fans, can be made satisfactorily at home. Frames and trays for use with artificial heat may be purchased complete if desired.

Homemade trays may be made of side and end boards three-fourths of an inch thick and two inches wide, and bottom boards of lathing spaced one-fourth of an inch. If desired, one-fourth inch galvanized wire mesh may be tacked to the side and end boards to form the bottoms of the trays. Frames for use before fans may be made of wood of convenient size. Frams for use with artificial heat should be made of noninflammable material to as great an extent as possible. As many as six trays may be placed one above the other when artificial heat is used. In drying before a fan the number of trays that may be placed one above the other will depend, to a large extent, upon the diameter of the fan. In drying in the sun, trays as described may be used or the products to be dried may be spread on sheets of paper or muslin held in place by weights.

Vegetables and fruits will dry better if sliced. They should be cut into slices one-eighth to one-fourth of an inch thick. If thicker, they may not dry thoroughly. While drying, the products should be turned or stirred from time to time. Dried products should be packed temporarily for three or four days and poured each day from one box to another to bring about thorough mixing, and so that the whole mass will have a uniform degree of moisture. If during this "conditioning" any pieces of the products are found to be too moist, they should be returned to the trays and dried further. When in condition, the products may be packed permanently in tight paper bags, insect-proof paper boxes or cartons, or glass or tin containers.

Advertising a Sale!

YOU don't leave your rig in the middle of the road and go to a fence-post to read a sale bill do you? Then don't expect the other fellow to do it.

ALL FOUR OF ROOSEVELT'S SONS ARE "DOING THEIR BIT" IN WAR

'Colonel Theodore Roosevelt in a speech delivered in the interest of the Red Cross at Oyster Bay made public the fact that two of his sons had already gone to France and that "the others are to follow." The two who have gone are Major Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., (No. 1 in the pictures), and Lieutenant Archie Roosevelt, (No. 2 in the pictures), both of whom it is understood, will be attached to General Pershing's headquarters. The announcement that they had been detailed to special duty was recently made in an army order.

This is the first installment of the Colonel's famous pledge that he and his four sons and at least one of his sons-in-law would be ready to join the country's forces whenever the occasion arose. The other sons are already in the service, and Dr. Richard Derby, the Colonel's son-in-law, is a major in the army reserve medical corps.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and Archie Roosevelt were both among the members of the original Plattsburg training camp in 1915, and Theodore was one of the group of Harvard men from whose decision, on the day after the Lusitania was sunk, that something would have to be done to help get the country into a state of better preparedness for war, the Plattsburg movement originated.

No. 4 in the pictures is Kermit, second son of Colonel Roosevelt, who has also received training at Plattsburg.

Archie, the Colonel's third son, has served in the Massachusetts naval militia, has received training at Plattsburg and is now a second lieutenant in the infantry reserve. Quentin Roosevelt (No. 3) is being trained at Mineola for the aviation service and is showing great skill as a flyer.

Colonel Roosevelt's other son-in-law, Nicholas Longworth, is a member of the House of Representatives from Ohio.

SONG SPEEDING THRO' THE STATES

It is Called "Indiana," and is the New "Tipperary."

Throughout the States Uncle Sam's troops are whistling and singing the strains of a new ballad which is destined to exceed the fame of the whilom "Tipperary." The song bears the simple title of "Indiana," and many affirm that it is even more inspiring than the British-Celtic craze of several months ago. The chorus runs thus:

The song was written by Ballard MacDonald and James F. Hanley. There is a sort of fascination to the text and tune, the chorus of which comprises a musical quotation of "On the Banks of the Wabash." The song is the leading number on the phonographs in the East.

USING A MEDICINE DROPPER.

The More Slanting It Is Held the Bigger the Drops Will Be.

When using a medicine dropper it is important to use it correctly, especially if measuring out drops of some powerful medicine like strychnine, morphine or arsenic, for drops vary widely in their size.

Dr. R. P. Garrow of London recently reported to the Lancet the results of some experiments he had made with a medicine dropper and a simple solution. He measured the solution very carefully and then took it all up into a medicine dropper, from which he turned it, drop by drop, holding the dropper at different angles and counting the drops as they fell.

With the dropper held vertically (at an angle of 90 degrees with the horizontal) its contents made 100 drops. Held at an angle of 60 degrees its contents made eighty-two drops; at 20 degrees they made sixty-eight drops, at 10 degrees they made sixty drops, and held horizontal they made only forty-eight drops.

In other words, the drops become progressively larger as the dropper is moved from the vertical position. A drop from a dropper held at an angle of 50 degrees is one-quarter larger than normal; thus, if the nurse has to give sixteen drops and holds the dropper slanting she is really giving twenty. And the more slanting the dropper the bigger the drops.

TEST YOUR LUNGS.

A Simple Method by Which One May Measure His Development.

People often suffer from weak, undeveloped lungs without suspecting it. True, small, feeble lungs are usually associated with a small, narrow or sunken chest, but not invariably. By means of the misuse of physical culture it is possible to develop large chest muscles, thus acquiring a big chest measurement, while the lungs remain small and ill nourished.

Again, lung mischief is often so slow and insidious in its approach that the trouble is not discovered until it is firmly established. Here, however, is a simple test which will tell you whether your lungs are healthy or not:

Take as deep a breath as you can, and then, in a slow but distinct voice count from one onward as far as you can without taking in more breath. The number of seconds you can continue counting is a pretty reliable index to the state of your lungs, so you should have some one to time you.

If your lungs are sound and normally developed your range will be between twenty and thirty-five seconds. If your limit is between ten and twenty seconds there is no need to be alarmed; probably your lungs are merely in need of exercise, to be readily obtained by regular deep breathing in pure air. A range less than ten seconds, however, points to more or less mischief, and you should not delay in having your lungs examined by a medical man.

True In Every Language.

Tennyson once attended a dinner where G. L. Craik proposed "The Ladies." In doing so he recalled the cynical advice given by a brother Scot to his children: "Tak my advice and dinna marry for siller. You can borrow cheaper."

Some time later Tennyson at his own table repeated Mr. Craik's story, but expressed the idea without attempting dialect. His son, Hallam, remarked, "Surely, father, Craik did not use those words."

"No, he did not; but, then, Craik is a Scotchman, and I am afraid to venture on repeating him exactly. However, it's almost as good in English as in Scotch, and it's tremendously true in both."

Why the Widow Got Him.

The folks were talking gossip with some neighbors who were making a social call. They were discussing a certain man that everybody agreed was such a fine man and wondering how ever it was that a rather gay grass widow had succeeded in landing him to the altar. "Well, I kin tell ye," said Uncle Ebenezer, who had continued to smoke his pipe without taking part in the discussion, "he had no chance."—Exchange.

Half Truths.

Half truths are often more calumnious than whole falsehoods. Not a word may be uttered, but a half suppressed innuendo, a dropped lip, an arched eyebrow, a shrugged shoulder, a significant look, an incredulous expression of countenance—nay, even an emphatic silence—may do the injurious work.

Highly Estimable.

"Half a loaf is better than no bread," said the philosopher.

"There's no doubt about the respect to which half a loaf is entitled," replied the plain person. "It costs as much as a whole loaf used to."—Washington Star.

Take a good book slowly. You see much finer country in a mover's wagon than you do from a car window.

STILL SAYS HE FLIRTED WITH GRAVE A YEAR

Pittsburg Man Frequently Fainted and Had to be Taken to Hospital.

"I'll tell you the truth, if I know this Tanlac was not going to be sold any more, I would try to buy every bottle on that counter over there before I left here today," said W. J. Sill at the drug store in Pittsburg, Pa., where Tanlac, the celebrated preparation, is being introduced. Mr. Sill, it might be well to mention, lives at 1206 Magnolia Street, North Side, and is connected with the New York Dye Works, at 628 Penn Avenue, in this city.

"Before I began taking it," he continued, "I weighed many pounds less than I ever weighed. Today, I got on the scales and tipped them 10 pounds more than I have weighed in 12 months or more. That's exactly what two bottles of Tanlac did for me. Just look at me. I'm filling these trousers rapidly.

"About two years ago I commenced having stomach trouble and it kept getting worse until I began having regular attacks of acute indigestion. When these attacks came on me, and they were usually accompanied by nervous spells and dizziness, I would just swell up out of all proportion and become as limp as a rag. My breath would get short and my pulse so weak I was afraid my heart would stop beating. I have become unconscious on the street numerous times and have had to be taken to the hospital. I tell you I was flirting with my grave, and would have been in it if it hadn't been for Tanlac.

Tanlac is now sold in Connellsville by the Connellsville Drug Co., where the premier preparation can be had.

"Wrong Number."

There is no place where the disposition of a person is better shown than at the telephone when one accidentally or otherwise rings up the wrong number. Then the answer to the signal tells the sort of person the respondent is. Sometimes he gets very mad and spitefully answers and then with a bang hangs up the receiver, as if the man who rings him up has done so with malice prepense. But sometimes the respondent answers with a fellow feeling in his heart and, knowing it is no fault of the person at the other end of the line, speaks gently and kindly and really makes of the accident a pleasant incident. How much we all prefer to deal with the latter individual!—Exchange.

Cap'n Warren's Wards

Copyright, 1911, by D. Appleton & Co.

"Hurrah! Excuse me while I gloat! Hurrah! We got it through his skull at last! Is it possible? But—but hold on! Perhaps it's too good to be true. Are you sure? How do you know?"

"He says so. See."

She handed him the letter. It was addressed to "My Dear Caroline" and in it Captain Elisha stated his intentions succinctly. After the plain speaking of the previous evening he should not, of course, burden them with his society any longer. He was leaving that morning, and as soon as he "located permanent moorings somewhere else" would notify his niece and nephew of his whereabouts.

"What?" he shouted. "You mean he's quit?"

For, as I told you, although I shall not impose my company on you, I am your guardian same as ever. I will see that your allowance comes to you regular, including enough for all household bills and pay for the hired help, and so on. If you need any extras at any time let me know, and if they seem to me right and proper I will send money for them. You will stay where you are, Caroline, and Stevie must go back to college right away. Tell him I say so, and if he does not I shall begin reducing his allowance according as I wrote him. He will understand what I mean. And Caroline, I want you and Stevie to feel that I am your anchor to windward, and when you get in a tight place, if you ever do, you can depend on me. Last night's talk has no bearing on that whatever. Goodby then, until my next. ELISHA WARREN.

Stephen read this screed to the end, then crumpled it in his fist and threw it angrily on the floor.

"The nerve!" he exclaimed. "He seems to think I'm a sailor on one of his ships, to be ordered around as he sees fit. I'll go back to college when I'm good and ready, not before."

Caroline shook her head. "Oh, no!" she said. "You must go today. He's right, Steve; it's the thing for you to do. He and I were agreed as to that. And you wouldn't stay and make it harder for me, would you dear?"

He growled a reluctant assent. "I suppose I shall have to go," he said sullenly. "My allowance is too beastly small to have him cutting it, and the old shark would do the very thing. He'd take delight in doing it, confound him! Well, he knows what we think of him. That's some comfort."

She did not answer. He looked at her curiously.

"Why, hang it all, Caro!" he exclaimed in disgust, "what ails you? Blessed if I shan't begin to believe you're sorry he's gone. You act as if you were."

"No, I'm not. Of course I'm not, I'm—I'm glad. He couldn't stay, of course. But I'm afraid—I can't help feeling that you and I were too harsh last night. We said things—dreadful things"—

"Be hanged! We didn't say half enough. Oh, don't be a fool, Caro! I was just beginning to be proud of your grit. And now you want to take it all back. Answer me, now, Are you sorry he's gone?"

"No. No, I'm not, really. But I—I feel somehow as if—as if everything was on my shoulders. You're going away and he's gone and—what is it, Edwards?"

The butler entered with a small parcel in his hand.

"I beg your pardon, Miss Caroline," he said. "I should have given you this last evening. It was by your place at the table. I think Captain Warren put it there, miss."

He bowed and retired. The girl sat turning the little white box in her hands.

"He left it for me," she said. "What can it be?"

Her brother snatched it impatiently.

"Why don't you open it and find out?" he demanded. "Perhaps it's his latchkey. Here! I'll do it myself."

He cut the cord and removed the cover of the little box. Inside was the jeweler's leather case. He took it out and pressed the spring. The cover flew up.

"Whew!" he whistled. "It's a present. And rather a decent one, too, by gad! Look Caro!"

He handed her the open case. She looked at the chain spread carefully on the white satin lining. Inside the cover was fitted a card. She turned it over and read: "To my niece, Caroline. With wishes for many happy returns and much love, from her Uncle Elisha Warren."

She sat gazing at the card. Stephen bent down, read the inscription and then looked up into her face.

"What?" he cried. "I believe—you're not crying! Well, I'll be hanged! Sis, you are a fool!"

* * * * * * *

The weather that morning was fine and clear. James Pearson, standing by the window of his rooms at the boarding house, looking out at the snow covered roofs sparkling in the sun, was miserable. When he retired the night before it was with a solemn oath to forget Caroline Warren altogether; to put her and her father and the young cad, her brother, utterly from his mind, never to be thought of again.

Why—why had he been so weak as to yield to Captain Elisha's advice? Why had he not acted like a sensible, self respecting man, done what he knew was right and persisted in his refusal to visit the Warrens? Why? Because he was an idiot, of course—a hopeless idiot, who had got exactly what he deserved! Which bit of philosophy did not help make his reflections less bitter.

After breakfast he went to his room, seated himself at his desk and took the manuscript of his novel from the drawer.

He was still sitting there, twirling an idle pencil between his fingers, when he heard steps outside his door. Some one knocked.

"Well, what is it?" he asked.

His landlady answered.

"Mr. Pearson," she said, "may I see you?"

He threw down the pencil and, rising, walked to the door and opened it. Mrs. Hepton was waiting in the hall. She seemed excited.

"Mr. Pearson," she said, "will you step downstairs with me for a moment? I have a surprise for you."

"A surprise? What sort of a surprise?"

"Oh, a pleasant one—at least I think it is going to be a pleasant one for all of us. But I'm not going to tell you what it is. You must come down and see for yourself."

On the second floor Mrs. Hepton stopped and pointed.

"It's in there," she said, pointing.

"There" was the room formerly occupied by Mr. Sniks, the long haired artist. Since his departure it had been vacant. Mrs. Hepton took Pearson by the arm and, leading him to the door, threw the latter open.

"Here he is," she said.

"Hello, Jim!" hailed Captain Elisha Warren cheerfully. "Ship ahoy! Glad to see you."

He was standing in the middle of the room, his hat on the table and his hands in his pockets.

Pearson was surprised—there was no doubt of that—not so much at the sight of his friend—he had expected to see or hear from the captain before the day was over—as at seeing him in that room. He could not understand what he was doing there.

Captain Elisha noted his bewildered expression and chuckled.

"Come aboard, Jim!" he commanded. "Come in and inspect. I'll see you later, Mrs. Hepton," he added, "and give you my final word. I want to hold office's council with Mr. Pearson here first."

Pearson began to get a clew to the situation.

"Captain Warren," he demanded, "have you—do you mean to say you've taken this room to live in?"

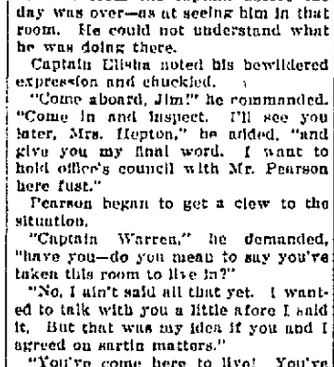

"No, I ain't said all that yet. I wanted to talk with you a little afore I said it. But that was my idea if you and I agreed on sartin matters."

"You've come here to live! You've left your—your niece's house?"

"Ya-as, I've left—that is, I left the way the Irishman left the stable where they kept the mule. He said there was all outdoors in front of him and only two feet behind. That's about the way 'twas with me."

"Have your nephew and niece"—

"Um-hum! They hinted that my room was better than my company, and, take it by and large, I guess they was right, for the present anyhow. I set up till 3 o'clock thinkin' it over, and then I decided to get out afore breakfast this mornin'. I didn't wait for any goodbys. They'd been said, or all I cared to hear"—Captain Elisha's smile disappeared for an instant—"last evenin'. The done was sort of bitter, but it had the necessary effect. At any rate, I didn't hanker for another one. I remembered what your landlady told me when I was here afore, about this stateroom bein' vacated, and I come down to look at it. It suits me well enough. Seems like a decent moorin's for an old salt water derelict like me. The price is reasonable, and I guess likely I'll take it. I guess I will."

"It wasn't your fault," he said.

"Why do you guess?" By George, I hope you will!"

"Do you? I'm much obliged. I didn't know but after last night, after the scrape I got you into, you might feel—well, sort of as if you'd seen enough of me."

The young man smiled bitterly. "It wasn't your fault," he said. "It was mine entirely. I'm quite old enough to decide matters for myself, and I should have decided as my reason and not my inclinations told me. You weren't to blame."

"Yes, I was. If you're old enough I'm too old, I cal'late. But I did think—however, there's no use goin' over that. I don't want you to think that I've hove overboard that 'responsibility' I was so easy and fresh about takin' on my shoulders. It's there yet, and I'll see you squared with Caroline afore this v'yage is over if I live."

His friend frowned.

"You needn't mind," he said. "I prefer that you drop the whole miserable business."

"Well, maybe. But, Jim, you've taken hold of these electric batteries that doctors have sometimes? It's awful easy to grab the handles of one of those contraptions, but when you want to drop 'em you can't. They don't drop easy. I took hold of the handles of Bije's affairs, and though it might be pleasanter to drop 'em I can't—or I won't."

"Then you're leaving your nephew and niece doesn't mean that you've given up the guardianship?"

Captain Elisha's jaw set squarely.

"I don't remember sayin' that it did," he answered, with decision. Then, his good nature returning, he added: "Well, Jim, there's just one thing more. Have I disgraced you a good deal bein' around with you and chummin' in with you the way I have? That is, do you think I've disgraced you? Are you ashamed of me?"

"I? Ashamed of you? You're joking!"

"No, I'm serious. Understand now, I'm not apologizin'. My ways are my ways, and I think they're just as good as the next feller's, whether he's from South Denboro or—well, Broad street. I've got a habit of thinkin' for myself and actin' for myself, and when I take off my hat it's to a bigger man than I am and not to a more stylish hat. But since I've lived here in New York I've learned that, with a whole lot of folks, hats themselves count more than what's underneath 'em. I haven't changed mine, and I ain't goin' to. Now, with that plain and understood do you want me to live here in the same house with you? I ain't fishin' for compliments. I want an honest answer."

He got it. Pearson looked him squarely in the eye.

"I do," he said. "I like you, and I don't care a blink about your hat. Is that plain?"

Captain Elisha's reply was delivered over the balusters in the hall.

"Hi!" he called. "Hi, Mrs. Hepton."

The landlady had been anxiously waiting. She ran from the dining room to the foot of the stairs.

"Yes?" she cried. "What is it?"

"It's a bargain," said the captain. "I'm ready to engage passage."

CHAPTER XIII.

A Rock or a Lighthouse.

THUS Captain Elisha entered another of New York's "circles," that which centered at Mrs. Hepton's boarding house. Within a week he was as much a part of it as if he had lived there for years. At lunch, on the day of his arrival, he made his appearance at the table in company with Pearson, and when the landlady exultantly announced that he was to be "one of our little party" thereafter he received and replied to the welcoming salutations of his fellow boarders with unruffled serenity.

The captain paid frequent visits to the offices of Sylvester, Kuhn & Graves in Pine street. Upon the senior partner, whom he esteemed and trusted not only as a business adviser but a friend, he depended for information concerning happenings at the Warren apartment.

Caroline sent him regular statements of her weekly expenditures, also bills for his approval, but she had written him but once, and then only a brief note. The note brought by a messenger accompanied a package containing the chain which he and Pearson selected with such deliberation and care at the Fifth avenue jeweler's. Under the existing circumstances, the girl wrote, she felt that she did not wish to accept presents from him and therefore returned this one.

After Pearson had departed one morning Captain Elisha put on his hat and coat and started for his lawyer's office. Sylvester was glad to see him and invited him to lunch.

"No, thank you," replied the captain. "I just run down to ask if there was anything new in the offin'. Last time I see you, you hinted you and your mates had sighted somethin' or other through the fog, and it might turn out to be a rock or a lighthouse, you couldn't tell which. Made up your mind yet?"

Sylvester shook his head. "No," he said slowly, "it is still foggy. We're busy investigating, but we're not ready to report."

"Humph! Well, what's the thing look like? You must be a little nigher to it by now."

The lawyer tapped his desk with a pencil. "I don't know what it looks like," he answered. "That is to say, I don't—I can't believe it is what it appears at this distance to be. If it is it is the most"—

He paused. Captain Elisha waited for him to go on and when he did so asked another question.

"The most what?" he demanded. "Is it likely to be very bad? Ain't discovered any more of those Cut Short bonds, have you?"

The bonds to which he referred were those of a defunct Short Line railroad. A large number of these bonds had been discovered among A. Rodgers Warren's effects. Part of his "tangled assets," the captain had termed them, differentiating from the "tangible" variety.

"Abbie, my housekeeper, has been writin' me," he went on, "about havin' the sewin' room papered. She wants my advice concernin' the style of paper. Says it ought to be pretty and out of the common, but not too expensive. I judge what she wants is somethin' that looks like money but ain't really worth more than 10 cents a mile. I've been thinkin' I'd send her a bale or so of those bonds. They'd fill the bill in those respects, wouldn't they?"

Sylvester laughed. "They certainly would, captain," he replied. "No, we haven't unearthed any more of that sort. And, as for this mystery of ours, I'll give you the answer, if it's worth giving at all, in a very short time. Meanwhile you go home and forget it."

"Well, I'll try. But I guess it sticks out on my face like a four days' toothache. But I won't worry about that. You know best whether to tell me now or not, and—well, I'm carryin' about all the worry my tonnage'll stand as 'tis."

He drew a long breath. Sylvester regarded him sympathetically.

"You mustn't take your nephew's and niece's treatment too much to heart," he said.

"Oh, I don't—that is, I pretend I don't. And I do try not to. But I keep thinkin' and wonderin' if 'twould have been better if I hadn't gone there to live at all. Hi hum! A man of my age hadn't ought to mind what a twenty-year-old girl says or does, 'specially when her kind, advisin' friends have shown her how she's been deceived and hypocritted. By the way, speakin' of hypocrites, I suppose there's just as much 'Dunnin'' as ever goin' on up there."

"Yes; a little more, if anything, I'm afraid. Your niece and Mrs. Dunn and her precious son are together now so constantly that people are expecting—well, you know what they expect."

"I can guess. I hope they'll be disapp'inted."

DYE MANUFACTURE NOT AS ENORMOUS AS IS SUPPOSED

But Will Have Big Influence Upon the Chemical Industry.

DEPENDENT INDUSTRIES

Include the Manufacture of Textiles, Leather, Paper and Inks Many Substitutes for Materials Have Been Developed by Chemical Research.

The manufacture of dyestuffs is not such an enormous enterprise as is commonly supposed, says Allen Rogers, in charge of industrial chemistry, Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y. It does carry with it, however, other possibilities, which make it far-reaching in its influence upon general chemical industry. Textiles, leather, paper and ink are all directly dependent upon dyes, while other industries depend either upon the by-products formed, or upon compounds which can be produced commercially only in conjunction with dyestuffs intermediates. Thus the production of phenol, commonly known as carbolic acid, is only possible when a large supply of benzine is available. At first glance carbolic acid does not seem so important, but when we consider that it is used in making the explosive picric acid we realize that it is very essential. Outside of the use of picric acid in time of war, carbolic acid is used in enormous quantities together with formaldehyde for the manufacture of phonographic records, electrical insulators, billiard balls, dolls' heads, fancy articles, and a variety of other materials.

In toluene, which is a product of the distillate of coal tar, we have the raw material for making the powerful explosive trinitrotoluene, T.N.T.; again from coal tar we have the makings of benzoic acid, salicylic, acetanilide and hundreds of other pharmaceutical chemicals, many of which are now being produced in this country. Most recent among examples of American progress is the production of domestic aspirin and salvarsan.

The United States has, within the past two years, increased its production of sulphuric acid from 3,000,000,000 tons to 7,500,000 tons annually. The production of gasolene from heavy oils is an American invention, which has helped to make it possible for this country to practically supply the world with motor fuel.

When it became impossible to obtain imported glassware, the American manufacturers stepped into the breach and today they are producing a higher grade product in this country than was ever obtained from Europe. Art pottery has also been placed on a strong footing.

The potash situation has given the American chemist much food for thought, and although progress has been made, we are as yet not out of the woods.

The manufacturer of leather has felt the impetus given to it by necessity. The fixation of nitrogen from the atmosphere has been carried to such an extent in this country that the danger of being shut off from the supply of saltpetre gives us no further cause of alarms. This process has also assured the farmer that his supply of fertilizer will not be curtailed in time of war and that it will be available in large quantities in time of peace. Many metals which were formerly imported are now being refined in America. In the case of tin we are producing large quantities from a source which German chemists claimed could not be worked on a commercial scale.

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THE BEAUTIFUL LIE"—A five act Metro production in which Frances Nelson, peeress of the screen emotional actresses, supported by a cast of unusual distinction is starred, and a comedy are today's attractions. Louise Joyce, (Frances Nelson), is brought under a false accusation and thrown among criminals. She goes to a large city and obtains employment as a stenographer for Mortimer Grierson, an architect. Gierson is a bon vivant to whom woman is sacred. He makes advances to Louise, but discovers that she is only to be won by honorable marriage. Through his nephew Grierson arranges a mock marriage. After his marriage Grierson sends Howard to Mexico to look after some business interests for him. Tiring of Louise, Grierson tells her the marriage was not a legal one. Then he leaves the house. Louise follows, imploring him to return and make their marriage legal. She is still protesting when he pushes her aside and she is arrested as a disorderly woman. Later she becomes a model and is painted by Paul Vivian, an artist, recently returned from Paris. He is a protege of Grierson, who has paid for his education. The young couple fall in love and after it is discovered that the marriage to Grierson, who later dies, has been legal, Paul and Louise marry. Tomorrow George Beban and Helen Jerome Eddy will be featured in "The Marcellini Millions." Wednesday, Enid Bennett will be starred in "The Girl Glory," a five reel Triangle feature. "A Woman's Awakening," featuring Seena Owen, will be presented Thursday.

SOISSON THEATRE.

The great vaudeville program for the first half of the week consists of the great female impersonator, Johnny Guise. He is a swell dresser and you wonder and keep on wondering. Lester Raymond is also an artist that keeps you thinking with a comedy novelty act. Bert and Sabie Marion, in an act called "Preparedness," is a scream. Bob Morris in singing, dancing and monologue is up to the minute. All forming a great program, a fine show in themselves. "The Neglected Wife" serial No. 1, with Ruth Roland is supposed to be equal to any serial the Soisson has produced. A beautiful Butterfly play, "Like Wildfire," with Herbert Rawlinson and Neva Gerber.

THE ARCADE.

Wand's Honeymooners, real musical comedy company, is at the Arcade all this week. The program will be changed Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The show for today and tomorrow is entitled "Nobbing a Nobleman," positively a cream from start to finish. It is a revised edition of the big musical comedy success, "A Topsy Turvey Honeymoon," written by William West. It has a consistent plot, clever dialogue and funny situations. The company carries a harmony quartet. The Belmont Four, that is alone worth the price of admission. Another big feature is Fogarty and Leggett, the fashion plates of vaudeville, doing high class society dancing and singing specialties. Eddie Dyer, the principal comedian, is heralded as the equal of any comedian in musical comedy. The show carries special scenery and electrical effects. A brand new Vitagraph comedy, "Wild Beasts at Large, or When the Menagerie Broke Loose," tells of the funny things that happen when a circus is wrecked in a small town. Then there is the first of the new Paula Blackton country life stories dedicated to all lovers of things beautiful, to all who see life's sunshine in the eyes of little children and their romance of nature in the growing things about us.

ORPHEUM THEATRE.

"THE MYSTIC HOUR."—Shown today is said to be one of the wierdest and most fascinating plays ever filmed. An unusual dream in which the hero believes he murders a man, comes true with such accuracy that the dreamer nearly loses his mind. Alma Hanlon appears in the leading role. "Tramp, Tramp," a good comedy, will also be shown. Tomorrow little Mary Sunshine appears in the delightful human interest Gold Rooster play, "Sunshine and Gold." Friday dainty Marguerite Clark is shown in "Seven Sisters."

CUMBERLAND'S BIG NEW INDUSTRY

A $2,250,000 Tire Plant Now Under Course of Erection in the Mountain City.

Final plans will soon be completed for the $2,250,000 automobile tire manufacturing plant which the Kelly-Springfield Tire company of Akron, O., will build at Cumberland. Construction plans have already been completed to the extent that permits of proceeding with the concrete and foundation work and the pumphouse, machine shop and garage. The engineers, S. Diescher & Sons, of Pittsburgh, expect in the near future to complete plans for the main buildings, and the work involved will be sublet. Grading, concrete, steel work, etc., will be separted from the building construction. Practically all the machinery with power plant equipment has been purchased.

This big factory will have an ultimate annual capacity of 200,000 tons, and it will occupy a site of 75 acres. The buildings will be in the main four-story plant buildings of concrete and steel, with separate structures for power plant and office. Various accompanying improvements include the construction of an industrial city with sewer system, water supply, electric light service, 60-foot boulevard in front of plant, 1,000-foot retaining wall to prevent possible future overflow of river, dwellings, etc. During its first year of operation this plant is to employ 3,000 men, which will be increased to 5,000 during the second year, and later to 10,000. City officials at Cumberland estimate that 2,000 homes will be needed for the employes, at an expenditure of probably $6,000,000.

Fashion's Changes.

"Fashion in earlier times," we are informed by a student, "originated in the royal courts, and most of the absurdities of fashion that we have inherited began as efforts of the designers of royal garb to conceal certain royal deformities or blemishes. These absurdities are being rapidly discarded."

Yes, it is now quite evident from the styles that humanity thinks it has nothing to hide.—Chicago News.

He who guides public opinion moves the hand that moves the world.—Rufus Choate.
